1689.

To the Reader.

I Longsince (gentle Reader) following the example of divers learned men, who had laboured much in this kind, Construed, and being thereunto importuned by many, published Lilies *Rules of the Genders of Nouns, the preterperfect Tenses and Supines of Verbs, his School-precepts, commonly called (Qui mihi)* Thomas Robinson's Treatise of the Heteroclites, and the Latin Syntaxis, which I did, being upon long and sufficient experience well assured, that a good part of the Masters daily pains, and the Scholars fruitless diligence being hereby removed, the one may to the great content of his Parents and Master, even by himself with better courage and greater profit learn his lesson in far shorter time, and keep it more faithfully in memory than he did before, and the other may chearfully with more comfort, and greater credit than was accustomed, teach more necessary things, as the declination of Nouns, conjugating of Verbs, and the meaning of the Rules, with a manifold use of the Examples, chusing rather the practice than the Teaching of the Art. If by this means I any ways help or incourage thee, I shall be very glad: If not, yet I have the hire and glory I sought for, namely, that I have endeavoured to stand thee in stead the best that I could. Farewel.

Thine in the Lord,
WILLIAM HAINE.
